

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

FANG-YUH HSIEH,

Plaintiff,

v.

JAMES B. PEAKE, Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs,

Defendant.

No. C 06-5281 PJH

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

The motion of defendant James B. Peake, Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs, for summary judgment came on for hearing before this court on March 5, 2008. Plaintiff Fang-Yuh Hsieh appeared in propria persona, and defendant appeared by his counsel Assistant United States Attorney Jennifer S. Wang. Having read the parties' papers and carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authority, and good cause appearing, the court hereby GRANTS defendants' motion.

INTRODUCTION

This is an employment discrimination case brought under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e ("Title VII"), and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 29 U.S.C. § 621, et seq. ("ADEA").

Plaintiff was employed at the Cooperative Studies Program Cooperating Center ("CSPCC") at the Department of Veterans Affairs ("VA") Palo Alto Health Care System, from September 1994 to October 2002. Plaintiff filed this action on August 28, 2006, alleging unlawful termination and failure to hire (failure to rehire after the termination),

1 based on sex, national origin, and age. On September 25, 2006, plaintiff filed a first 2 amended complaint, clarifying that he was also alleging retaliation for engaging in prior 3 protected activity.

4 On May 23, 2007, plaintiff filed a second amended complaint, adding allegations 5 regarding events that occurred after he filed the original complaint, and also adding race
 6 (Asian) as a basis for the alleged discrimination. The Secretary now seeks summary 7 judgment.

8 BACKGROUND

9 A. Plaintiff's Employment at the Palo Alto CSPCC

10 Plaintiff is a 59-year-old Taiwanese-born biostatistician. He holds a Master's degree 11 in biostatistics, and a Ph.D. in statistics. In August 1994, plaintiff accepted a "term" 12 appointment at the Palo Alto CSPCC as a mathematical statistician.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff signed a 13 document entitled "Conditions of Term Appointment," which stated, "Your job is a 14 temporary one. . . . [T]here is no guarantee as to how long you may be employed. It may 15 be a few days or a few months, but no longer than four (4) years."

16 The August 31, 1994, letter informing plaintiff of the appointment stated that it would 17 become effective on September 18, 1994, and that it was "not-to-exceed September 17, 18 1997." Plaintiff's "Notification of Personnel Action," dated September 18, 1994, states that 19 the "reason for temporary appointment" was "limited funding."

20 Plaintiff was hired for the position by Dr. Philip Lavori, the then-Director of the Palo 21 Alto CSPCC.<sup>2</sup> In a declaration filed in support of the Secretary's motion, Dr. Lavori states 22 that plaintiff was hired for a term appointment because the CSPCC's budget is limited and 23 depends on the availability of project funding. Plaintiff's "Notice of Personnel Action," dated 24

25 <sup>1</sup> The VA's Cooperative Studies Program ("CSP"), a division of the VA Research and 26 Development group, plans and conducts large clinical trials. Through its Coordinating Centers, 27 the CSP provides statistical and administrative support to VA investigators conducting clinical trials. The Palo Alto CSPCC is one of five Coordinating Centers.

28 <sup>2</sup> Dr. Lavori was the Director of the Palo Alto CSPCC from November 1992 until July 2004.

September 18, 1997, states that the “reason for temporary appointment” (referring to the one-year extension of the term appointment) was “research project with limited funding.”

Prior to the expiration of the term of plaintiff’s appointment, Dr. Lavori extended it to September 17, 1998. On September 17, 1998, plaintiff’s term appointment was converted to a time-limited “Schedule B” appointment, with an end date of September 16, 2001. Plaintiff’s “Notice of Personnel Action,” dated September 17, 1998, states that the “reason for temporary appointment” was “research project.”

Dr. Lavori states in his declaration that it was his understanding that “Schedule B” positions are exempted from the Office of Personnel Management’s competitive service hiring process; that the VA is permitted to hire a number of investigatory and scientific professionals as “Schedule B” employees; and that those positions must be project-specific. In addition, because “Schedule B” appointments are excepted from the competitive hiring process, the agency is under no obligation to announce available appointments.<sup>3</sup> Dr. Lavori asserts that because Palo Alto CSPCC’s budget fluctuates according to its success in receiving project funding, the use of “Schedule B” appointments allows the CSPCC to match its staffing to its variable project needs.

Throughout his employment with the Palo Alto CSPCC, plaintiff worked as a mathematical statistician. As a mathematical statistician, he participated in clinical projects <sup>3</sup> With the exception of certain high-level jobs, all civil service employees in the executive branch of the federal government are either in the “competitive service” or in the “excepted service.” 5 U.S.C. §§ 2102(a), 2103(a). See Nat’l Treasury Employees Union v. Helfer, 53 F.3d 1289, 1290 (D.C. Cir. 1995). Applicants for employment in the competitive service must generally take a competitive examination, which is administered by the Office of Personnel Management (“OPM”). The applicants are ranked according to their examination scores, and an agency needing to hire an employee must select from the three highest-scoring applicants.

When warranted by “conditions of good administration,” the President is authorized by statute to specify “necessary exceptions of positions from the competitive service.” 5 U.S.C. § 3302(1). The President delegated this authority to OPM, “when it determines that appointments thereto through competitive examination are not practicable.” Exec. Order No. 10,577; 5 C.F.R. § 6.1(a); see Helfer, 53 F.3d at 1291. OPM has divided excepted service positions into three categories – “Schedule A,” “Schedule B,” and “Schedule C.” 5 C.F.R. § 6.2. “Schedule B” positions – the type of position held by plaintiff in this case – are “[p]ositions other than those of a confidential or policy-determining character for which it is not practicable to hold a competitive examination.” Id.

1 funded by the VA's CSP. While at the Palo Alto CSPCC, plaintiff worked as the 2 mathematical statistician on Project 6 (a study to evaluate the effectiveness of geriatric 3 evaluation and management clinics and units) and Project 420 (a study examining two 4 methods of psychotherapy treatment for post-traumatic stress syndrome). He also worked 5 on Project 490 (a proposed $110 million study to examine the efficacy and safety of 6 testosterone in elderly men).

7 Plaintiff testified in his deposition that his role as a mathematical statistician was to 8 help plan the design for each clinical trial; recruit patients for the trial; and collect, analyze,
9 and publish data gathered through the trial. In addition, plaintiff coordinated with the study 10 chair (the person in charge of the clinical study), and supervised other personnel on the 11 project, including the statistical programmer.

12 Plaintiff asserts that at some point in March 2000, he sent an e-mail to Dr. Lavori
13 regarding complaints of "discriminatory treatment" by another CSPCC employee, Maryann 14 Boeger, against certain unidentified employees. Plaintiff provides a declaration by a 15 Carmen Calderon, stating that plaintiff showed her the e-mail and told her he had sent it to 16 Dr. Lavori. At some point in 2000, Dr. Lavori requested Dr. Kelvin Lee to look into plaintiff's 17 allegations. Dr. Lee reported to Dr. Lavori that he was unable to find any corroboration for 18 plaintiff's allegations.

19 Around September 14, 2001, Dr. Lavori informed plaintiff in a memorandum that his 20 "Schedule B" appointment, which was set to expire on September 15, 2001, would be 21 renewed, but only for thirteen months (to October 15, 2002).

22 Dr. Lavori states that he decided not to renew plaintiff's time-limited appointment
23 beyond October 15, 2002 because plaintiff's two research projects – Projects 6 and 420 – 24 were ending, and there were no other studies available that were suited to plaintiff's skills.
25 Although plaintiff had had some initial involvement in Project 490, the CSPCC had not 26 received funding for that project. Moreover, it was a very large study, which Dr. Lavori 27 states was not suited to plaintiff, who worked best on smaller studies. (As it turned out, 28 CSPCC never received funding for Project 490.)

1 Dr. Lavori's memo advised plaintiff that his appointment was being extended for 2 thirteen months to allow him to finish the two research projects, and to give him time to look 3 for other employment. The memo also stated that the CSPCC had not received funding for 4 Project 490, and that even if it did, plaintiff's role would be limited to initial coordination for 5 the project, until the expiration of the thirteen-month period. Plaintiff's last day of 6 employment at the Palo Alto CSPCC was October 15, 2002.

7 At some point in September 2001, plaintiff met with Dr. Lavori. Dr. Kelvin Lee, the 8 Associate Director of the CSPCC was also present. According to Dr. Lavori, he explained 9 to plaintiff at the meeting why he had decided not to renew his appointment, and also told 10 him that the term was being extended for 13 months to allow plaintiff to complete his 11 projects and find another job. He states that he also offered to help plaintiff find another 12 job.

13 During the last year and a half of his employment at the Palo Alto CSPCC, plaintiff 14 had various disagreements with Ms. Boeger, who became the Administrative Officer for the 15 Palo Alto CSPCC in July 2001, and the Assistant Director of Operations around 2002.
16 According to Dr. Lavori, Ms. Boeger was responsible for assigning tasks, based on 17 requests from mathematical statisticians, to the CSPCC's research assistants.

18 According to plaintiff, in 2001 and 2002, he and Ms. Boeger disagreed about 19 responsibility for administrative tasks and whether plaintiff could assign administrative tasks 20 to assistants himself, without funneling those requests through Ms. Boeger; whether 21 plaintiff could have access to the government car; and whether plaintiff could be compelled 22 to move offices to allow for asbestos and other abatement conducted by CSPCC facility
23 management. (However, Ms. Boeger never served as plaintiff's supervisor.)

24 Plaintiff claims that around March or May 2001, he included complaints about Ms.
25 Boeger in his response to an anonymous survey of all VA researchers. The survey was 26 created at the request of the VA's Chief Research and Development Officer, to assess the 27 researchers' views of the current status of research in the VA and the effects of the VA's 28 1995 reorganization on research. Surveys were conducted in 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001,

1 by Dr. David L. Ronis of the Center for Practice Management and Outcomes Research at 2 the Ann Arbor Health Services Research and Development Center of Excellence in 3 Michigan.

4 Plaintiff sent his anonymous survey responses for the 2001 survey directly to Dr.
5 Ronis. According to plaintiff, he included with his survey responses a half-page of 6 handwritten text stating that he had received complaints from co-workers that Ms. Boeger
7 was harassing and yelling at minority employees. He claims that even though the survey 8 was supposed to be anonymous, there was a number on it that could be used to identify 9 the person who completed it.

10 Plaintiff also claims that in 2002, he complained about Ms. Boeger in his anonymous
11 responses to an internal CSPCC staff questionnaire circulated in preparation for a staff 12 retreat. Ms. Boeger collected the survey responses. Plaintiff claims that he delivered his 13 response by dropping it into an envelope with three or four other survey responses.

14 B. The Post-Employment Period

15 Plaintiff's last day at the Palo Alto CSPCC was October 15, 2002. He claims, 16 however, that he worked for ten months after October 2002 "without pay." When asked at 17 his deposition why he continued to do work on behalf of CSPCC after his term appointment 18 had ended, he responded that he believed that "if I keep a good relationship with them, I 19 can find a better job." He also hoped that he would be reinstated when the CSPCC got 20 more funding. When asked whether anyone authorized him to continue working for pay 21 after the termination, he responded, "Even when I was there, nobody even authorized me 22 to do the job because it's a – it's a collaboration. You don't need anyone to authorize." He 23 claimed that "nobody authorized anything, it's just a continuation of the project."

24 In September 2003, the Palo Alto CSPCC obtained funding for a new study and 25 received a new study for planning. Dr. Lavori believed that there might be an increase in 26 the CSPCC's workload, and that it might be necessary in the future to hire another 27 mathematical statistician. However, the CSPCC did not have enough funds at the time to 28 fill such a position. Dr. Lavori states that at approximately that time, Surai Thaneemit-

1 Chen, then employed at the CSPCC as a statistical programmer, approached him and 2 expressed an interest in becoming a mathematical statistician. She had been working as a 3 statistical programmer for the CSPCC since around 1996.

4 According to Dr. Lavori, the role of a statistical programmer and that of a 5 mathematical statistician on a study are different. The statistician has a greater 6 involvement in the operational details of initiating the study, in communicating with the 7 study's investigators, and in planning. The statistician leads the study team.

8 Dr. Lavori states that because the Palo Alto CSPCC had extra statistical 9 programming capacity at that time, he decided to optimize the use of the existing staff and 10 promote Ms. Thaneemit-Chen to a trial period as a mathematical statistician. After she 11 successfully completed the trial period, Dr. Lavori offered her a Schedule B appointment as 12 a mathematical statistician in April 2004.

13 Around August 2005, the VA determined that the Palo Alto CSPCC needed an 14 additional statistical programmer to work full-time on its DNA Bank project. This position 15 was advertised in various locations in September 2005, November 2005, and January 16 2006, including on Craigslist.org.

17 According to the posting on Craigslist, the position required a strong level of 18 proficiency in the areas of verbal and written communications skills; statistical results 19 summarization; statistical modeling; interaction with statisticians, clinicians, and data 20 management personnel to establish project timelines and initiate statistical discussions; 21 leadership to junior programmers; and programming at an intermediate or advanced level 22 in SAS, S+/R.

23 The position required a minimum of a Masters in statistics or biostatistics; excellent 24 technical, analytical, and communication skills; knowledge of SAS and S+/R; and U.S.
25 citizenship. Also desirable would be knowledge of DataFax and Unix; prior clinical research 26 and statistical methodology programming experience; and experience in report writing and 27 analysis plan design.

28 Dr. Lavori was not involved in the selection process, as he had been on "leave

1 without pay” status since January 2005. Jennifer Cockroft, Brian Doherty, and Ms.
2 Thaneemit-Chen were involved in the process. Ms. Cockroft was the project manager for 3 the DNA Bank, and Mr. Doherty was the Programming Group Leader (and later, IT 4 Manager), and supervised the CSPCC’s statistical programmers. Ms. Thaneemit-Chen, 5 who had worked for CSPCC as a statistical programmer for eight years, had knowledge of 6 the exact duties and abilities required for the job. Thus, Mr. Doherty testified that he relied 7 on Ms. Thaneemit-Chin’s judgment to determine whether the programming code samples 8 submitted by the applicants evidenced that desired level of programming skill.

9 On November 6, 2005, plaintiff responded to the Craigslist posting. Mr. Doherty 10 states in his declaration that plaintiff was not selected for an interview because he had no 11 prior work experience as a programmer and failed to provide specific examples of statistical 12 programming tools that he had used. In addition, Mr. Doherty testified (and states in his 13 declaration), that he determined, based on consultation with Ms. Thaneemit-Chin, that the 14 SAS programming code sample that plaintiff submitted did not include any statistical 15 programming or intermediate-level coding.

16 Mr. Doherty states further that plaintiff’s application did not demonstrate his ability to 17 communicate with study investigators and mathematical statisticians about the details of 18 their programming. He asserts that although plaintiff, as a mathematical statistician, had 19 experience communicating about statistical analyses and biostatistics, the ability to 20 communicate about programming details and code is a different skill.

21 The selection committee interviewed seven candidates for the position, and on 22 March 5, 2006, hired Suzanne Wight, a Caucasian female, for the position. At the time 23 Wight was hired, she was approximately 43 years old. Prior to her employment at CSPCC, 24 Ms. Wight had worked as a statistical programmer in a health care environment. In his 25 deposition, Mr. Doherty noted that Ms. Wight’s resume reflected work experience as an 26 “SAS Programmer” in the health care environment, going back to March 1999, whereas 27 plaintiff’s resume showed no experience as a statistical programmer, just work as a 28 statistician.

1 C. Plaintiff's EEO Charges

2 On January 9, 2002, plaintiff contacted the EEO counselor at the VA in Menlo Park, 3 asserting that he had been discriminated against on the basis of race, national origin, and 4 age (53 at the time). According to the letter from the EEO counselor to plaintiff, plaintiff's 5 proposed resolution was that he be retained to "continue working on the $110 million dollar 6 grant that he fought for and he would like to know why Dr. Lavori is terminating his 7 appointment."<sup>4</sup>

8 On February 11, 2002, plaintiff filed his first EEO charge, alleging that the "proposed 9 termination of my schedule-B appointment ended October 14, 2002, is based on age, race 10 and national origin." He stated that the dates of occurrence were November 27, 2001 and 11 September 14, 2001. The September 14, 2001, date appears to be a reference to the letter 12 from Dr. Lavori advising plaintiff that his "Schedule B" appointment would be extended for 13 13 months. It is not clear what the November 27, 2001 date refers to. The remedy sought 14 by plaintiff was "a career appointment to work on the newly funded $110 million dollars 15 project that two investigators and I proposed."

16 In a one-and-a-half page attachment to the administrative charge, plaintiff asserted 17 that in the past 10 years, approximately 100 employees had been hired at the Palo Alto
18 CSPCC, none of whom had received a career appointment. He claimed that employees 19 were "constantly fearful of being fired," and that the employee turnover had been very high.
20 He stated that he had been hired 8 years previously, "and since then my Schedule B 21 appointment has been successfully renewed periodically." He claimed that he was the 22 oldest employee without a career appointment.

23 Plaintiff alleged further that he and two investigators had recently written a grant for 24 over $110 million, "which was approved pending on collecting funding from several 25 government agencies and a private industry." He claimed that his "sources" had told him 26 that the collection of funding would be successfully completed "soon," but that

27
28 <sup>4</sup> This reference to the "$100 million grant" is a reference to the funding for Project 490, which was never approved.

1 notwithstanding this, his appointment was not being renewed, although the grant proposal 2 had “budgeted for my full time salary for the next 8 years.”

3 He also claimed that he had been “told” that his job would be contracted out to the 4 Stanford University Biostatistics department, and that it was “known that none of the 5 faculties at Stanford Biostatistic department are colored people.” He asserted that the 6 previous year, CSPCC had advertised for biostatisticians, and that he had heard Ms.
7 Boeger complain that all the applicants were Asian. He claimed that the administrative staff 8 refused to fill the positions, and that they were “bully toward Asian employees.” He 9 asserted that in the past few years, there had been quite a few complaints – both formal 10 and informal.

11 As for himself, he claimed that he had recently discovered that the Director of 12 CSPCC (referring to Dr. Lavori) had given him an “unacceptable” rating for customer 13 service on his performance review, after he had signed the performance review, and that 14 he had gone through the union and Human Resources to have the rating changed. He also 15 attached a copy of an e-mail exchange between himself and Ms. Boeger in June 2001, 16 which appears to have something to do with their on-going dispute over the assignment of 17 work to the research assistants (though it is not entirely clear).

18 On March 2, 2002, plaintiff filed a second EEO charge alleging “non-sexual” 19 harassment by Ms. Boeger and Dr. Lavori, based on plaintiff’s race, national origin, and 20 age, and also alleging retaliation for his January and February 2002 EEO activity. Plaintiff 21 stated that the dates of occurrence were January 10, 2002, and January 17, 2002. It is not 22 clear what these dates refer to. The remedy sought by plaintiff was “the harassment to 23 stop and a career appointment in research.”

24 Following the Administrative Judge’s grant of summary judgment in favor of the VA, 25 and the VA’s finding of no discrimination regarding plaintiff’s first two EEO charges (Nos.
26 2000-0640-2002101704 and 2000-0640-2002101292), plaintiff appealed to the EEOC’s 27 Office of Federal Operations (“OFO”). The OFO accepted the appeal, and issued a 28 decision on February 5, 2004.

1 The OFO summarized plaintiff's claims as alleging race, national origin, and age 2 discrimination based on the following – (1) the Assistant Director of Operations (referring to 3 Ms. Boeger) gave plaintiff tasks to complete and then reported that he was uncooperative; 4 (2) Ms. Boeger yelled at plaintiff and threatened not to allow him to use the government 5 vehicle, and plaintiff was subsequently prohibited from using the government vehicle; (3) 6 plaintiff discovered he had received an “unsatisfactory” rating in the area of “Customer 7 Service” after he had already signed the performance appraisal; (4) on January 17, 2002, 8 the Director of CSPCC (referring to Dr. Lavori) assigned plaintiff more work than he could 9 complete, and gave him a “direct order” to respond to him regarding the whereabouts of 10 logs for specific projects; (5) on June 6, 2001, Ms. Boeger sent plaintiff an e-mail about 11 incorrectly failing to filter his work for other employees through her; and (6) on September 12 14, 2001, plaintiff was informed by Dr. Lavori that his term appointment would not be 13 renewed after October 14, 2002.

14 The OFO stated that after reviewing the record in its entirety, it had determined to 15 affirm the VA's final order, because a preponderance of the record evidence did not 16 establish that discrimination occurred. The OFO advised plaintiff that he could file a 17 request for reconsideration within 30 days, and that he could file a civil action within 90 18 days of the date of receipt of the decision. Plaintiff apparently filed a request for 19 reconsideration, which was denied on March 19, 2004. Plaintiff did not file a civil action 20 within 90 days of this final denial.

21 In August 2004, almost two years after plaintiff's employment at the Palo Alto 22 CSPCC had ended, plaintiff contacted the EEO counselor at the VA, alleging that the 23 CSPCC had failed to reinstate him when a mathematical statistician position became 24 available around September 2003 because of his age, race, national origin, and 2002 EEO
25 activity. The September 2003 date appears to be a reference to the provisional (or trial)
26 appointment of Ms. Thaneemit-Chen as a mathematical statistician.

27 On September 7, 2004, plaintiff filed his third EEO charge, alleging failure to 28 hire/reinstate, based on age, sex, and national origin, and also alleging retaliation for prior

1 EEO activity. Plaintiff asserted that the date of occurrence was "October 15, 2002, to 2 present as a continuing event; July 7, 2004; August 20, 2004."

3 In the section for explanation of the claims in this third EEO charge, plaintiff stated,

4 Since the termination of my term appointment on 10/15/2002, I had continued
5 to receive requests from the agency until August, 2003, to work on three 6 projects . . . . On 1/9/2002, I filed an EEO complaint on job termination.
7 During the process of my EEO complaint until 3/19/2004, and continuing 8 communications through Congresswoman Eshoo until 8/19/2004 . . . I have 9 continued to request reinstatement but was denied by the agency. On 10 7/7/2004, I heard the agency had promoted a statistical programmer (Surai 11 Thaneemit, BD 8/23/1972, female, national origin Thailand) to a Mathematical 12 Statistician. I called the agency on 8/20/2004 and was told there was no 13 position available for me.

14 This mention of Congresswoman Eshoo refers to a communication by plaintiff with 15 the office of Anna Eshoo (his Congressional representative). On February 25, 2004, 16 plaintiff wrote Congresswoman Eshoo, complaining that "Schedule B" employees were not 17 protected from discrimination, especially age discrimination, and asking her to write the 18 Palo Alto CSPCC "to obtain a reason, if any, why I was fired at the age of 55 after a long 19 term services with excellent performance records." Congresswoman Eshoo apparently did 20 write to Elizabeth Freeman, then-Director of the VA-Palo Alto, on March 10, 2004, and 21 some exchange of correspondence followed, through approximately August 2004.

22 Following the VA's finding (on February 23, 2006) of no discrimination regarding 23 plaintiff's third EEO charge (No. 200N-0640-2004103984), plaintiff appealed to the OFO.
24 The OFO accepted the appeal, and issued a decision on August 14, 2006.

25 The OFO stated that plaintiff alleged sex, age, and national origin discrimination, as 26 well as reprisal for prior EEO activity, based on the VA's refusal to rehire or reinstate him to 27 the position of mathematical statistician when his term appointment ended and when he 28 was not allowed to compete for the position.

The OFO stated that the record revealed that plaintiff was selected to fill a limited-term appointment as a mathematical statistician in the Palo Alto CSPCC; that the original term of appointment was September 18, 1994, to September 17, 1997; that the term appointment was extended to September 17, 1998; that the term appointment was

1 subsequently converted to an excepted "Schedule B" appointment with a not-to-exceed 2 date of September 16, 2001; that in September 2001, plaintiff was informed that his 3 appointment would be extended 13 months to allow him to complete two research projects
4 and to look for other employment; and that plaintiff's appointment was extended to October 5 15, 2002, and was not renewed.

6 The OFO noted that plaintiff had previously filed a complaint in which he had alleged 7 that he was discriminated against when his limited term appointment was not renewed, that 8 the AJ had granted summary judgment in favor of the VA, and that the OFO had affirmed 9 the AJ and denied plaintiff's request for reconsideration.

10 The OFO then reviewed the AJ's opinion granting summary judgment. The OFO
11 noted that the AJ agreed with the VA that plaintiff had failed to contact an EEO counselor 12 within 45 days of the alleged discrimination, as required by 29 C.F.R. §§ 1614.105(a)(1).
13 The AJ found that although plaintiff had developed a reasonable suspicion of discrimination 14 as early as February 2004 (based on a written statement by plaintiff on that date to the 15 effect that he knew that the VA was promoting "Person A" – apparently a reference to Ms.
16 Thaneemit-Chen – to a biostatistician position to take over plaintiff's job), he did not contact 17 an EEO counselor until August 2004. Nevertheless, the AJ stated that she would assume 18 that plaintiff had made timely EEO counselor contact.

19 Regarding plaintiff's claims, however, the AJ found no discrimination. The AJ noted 20 that the record revealed that "Person A" – a Thai female born in 1972 – worked for the VA 21 as a research health science specialist, and, in September 2003, expressed an interest in 22 becoming a mathematical statistician. After a trial period, in which she was found to be 23 qualified, her term appointment was converted to an excepted "Schedule B" appointment 24 with a not-to-exceed date of February 22, 2005.

25 Plaintiff had asserted that the VA discriminatorily distorted the "Schedule B" 26 appointment process by failing to announce existing vacancies and advertising for positions 27 assigned to research locations other than Menlo Park; that the VA provided budgeting for 28 facilities other than Menlo Park; and that he was denied discovery regarding the VA budget.

1 The OFO found, however, that the AJ's grant of summary judgment was appropriate, 2 as no genuine issue of material fact existed. The OFO stated that the record established 3 that the VA did not discriminate or retaliate against plaintiff for filing a complaint or for 4 complaining about discriminatory treatment against others at the VA. The OFO found that 5 plaintiff had not established that he was denied the opportunity to be hired or considered for 6 positions within the agency, or that the agency did not adhere to processes for filling non-7 competitive positions for prohibited reasons.

8 The OFO also found that the record established that the VA could make research 9 staff appointments without going through the competitive process – i.e., without announcing 10 vacancies or holding open competition. The OFO found further that plaintiff had not shown 11 that the VA's reasons were pretextual, and had also failed to present evidence that the 12 VA's actions were motivated by discriminatory animus toward plaintiff's protected class.
13 With regard to plaintiff's complaints about the adequacy of discovery, the OFO found that 14 the AJ had allowed sufficient time for the completion of discovery.

15 The OFO advised plaintiff of his right to request reconsideration, within 30 days, and 16 his right to file a civil action, within 90 days of the date of receipt of the decision. Plaintiff 17 filed the present action on August 28, 2006, approximately two weeks after the OFO issued 18 its decision.

19 On September 25, 2006, plaintiff contacted the VA EEO counselor, and alleged that 20 he had not been selected for the statistical programmer position at CSPCC, originally 21 advertised in the fall of 2005, because of his race, age, gender, national origin, and prior 22 EEO activity. He filed a fourth EEO charge on October 20, 2006.

23 The EEO investigator's report was issued on May 7, 2007, finding no discrimination.
24 It is not clear whether plaintiff received a right-to-sue letter on this claim. In his second 25 amended complaint ("SAC"), filed May 17, 2007, he states that he received right-to-sue 26 letters on "8/2006 and 12/2006."

27 D. Claims Alleged in Second Amended Complaint

28 In the SAC, plaintiff checked the boxes labeled "failure to employ me" and

1 “termination of my employment,” and also checked “other acts,” which he describes follows:
 2 “Unpaid compensation for works from October 2002 to August 2003 after termination of 3 appointment in 2002. Failure for re-instatements and failures for selection for positions 4 applied.” He claims discrimination on the basis of race, sex, national origin, and age, and 5 also alleges reprisal for prior complaints of employment discrimination. He does not 6 mention harassment.

7 Plaintiff’s statement of his claims is as follows (in its entirety):

8 (1) I was hired as a statistician by the VA in September 1994. After 9 complaining about management’s discrimination treatments in emails and in two VA surveys, I was terminated in October 2002.

10 (2) From October 2002 to August 2003, I continued to work on the same 11 projects without compensation.

12 (3) While the personnel budget at Palo Alto CSPCC has been continuously 13 increasing from 2000 to present, the agency diverted its funding, changed its advertising and hiring practices to avoid plaintiff’s job application.

14 (4) Upon my termination in 2002, a less-qualified younger female statistical programmer had immediately taken over my position.

15 (5) In November 2005, I applied to an advertisement for a statistical 16 programmer position. I was told in late 2006 that the position had been filled by a less-qualified younger female candidate.

17 Plaintiff asserts that the alleged discrimination occurred on “12/01/2000 to 18 1/17/2007.” He claims that he filed administrative charges on “01/2002, 08/2004, 12/2006,” 19 and that the EEOC issued notices of right to sue on “08/2006 and 12/2006.” The August 20 2006 right-to-sue notice is the one referenced in the OFO’s August 14, 2006, decision 21 described above. Apart from this statement in the SAC, the court has located no reference 22 in any of the papers to a December 2006 right-to-sue letter. The SAC contains no 23 reference to a right-to-sue letter issued after the May 7, 2007, EEO investigator’s report.

24 Thus, it appears that plaintiff is alleging the following claims, based on age, race, 25 gender, and national origin discrimination and/or retaliation: (1) that Dr. Lavori wrongfully 26 terminated his employment at the Palo Alto CSPCC in October 2002 (although plaintiff also 27 seems to be alleging a claim based on the notification in September 2001 that plaintiff’s 28 employment would end on October 14, 2002); (2) that plaintiff was not “reinstated” when

1 the mathematical statistician position filled by Ms. Thaneemit-Chen became available in 2 2003; (3) that he was not selected for the statistical programmer position in 2006; and (4) 3 that he was not compensated for work he performed voluntarily after his employment was 4 terminated and he left the Palo Alto CSPCC in October 2002.

5 DISCUSSION

6 A. Legal Standard

7 Summary judgment is appropriate when there is no genuine issue as to material 8 facts and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56.
9 Material facts are those that might affect the outcome of the case. Anderson v. Liberty 10 Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A dispute as to a material fact is “genuine” if there 11 is sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to return a verdict for the nonmoving party. Id.

12 A party seeking summary judgment bears the initial burden of informing the court of 13 the basis for its motion, and of identifying those portions of the pleadings and discovery 14 responses that demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp.
15 v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Where the moving party will have the burden of proof 16 at trial, it must affirmatively demonstrate that no reasonable trier of fact could find other 17 than for the moving party; however, where the nonmoving party will bear the burden of 18 proof at trial, that party can prevail merely by pointing out to the district court that there is 19 an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party’s case. Id.

20 Once the moving party meets its initial burden, the nonmoving party must go beyond 21 the pleadings and, by its own affidavits or discovery, “set forth specific facts showing that 22 there is a genuine issue for trial.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e); Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. “To 23 show the existence of a ‘genuine’ issue, . . . [a plaintiff] must produce at least some 24 significant probative evidence tending to support the complaint.” Smolen v. Deloitte, 25 Haskins & Sells, 921 F.2d 959, 963 (9th Cir. 1990) (quotations omitted).

26 The court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-moving 27 party. United States v. City of Tacoma, 332 F.3d 574, 578 (9th Cir. 2003). The court must 28 not weigh the evidence or determine the truth of the matter, but only determine whether

1 there is a genuine issue for trial. Balint v. Carson City, 180 F.3d 1047, 1054 (9th Cir.
2 1999). Regardless of whether plaintiff or defendant is the moving party, each party must 3 “establish the existence of the elements essential to [its] case, and on which [it] will bear 4 the burden of proof at trial.” Celotex, 477 U.S. at 322.

5 B. Legal Framework for Title VII Claims

6 Title VII provides that “[i]t shall be an unlawful employment practice for an employer 7 to fail or refuse to hire or to discharge any individual with respect to his compensation, 8 terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of such individual's race, color, 9 religion, sex, or national origin.” 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (1). The employer is also prohibited 10 from retaliating against an employee for his opposition to an unlawful employment practice.
11 See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a); Lam v. Univ. of Hawaii, 40 F.3d 1551, 1558-59 (9th Cir.
12 1994).

13 To establish a prima facie case under Title VII, the plaintiff must offer evidence that 14 gives rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination, either through the burden-shifting 15 framework set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792 (1973), or with 16 direct or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent. Vasquez v. County of Los 17 Angeles, 349 F.3d 634, 640 (9th Cir. 2004). The McDonnell-Douglas analysis is also 18 applied in ADEA cases. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp., 329 F.3d 740, 745 (9th Cir. 2003).

19 Under the McDonnell Douglas analysis, the plaintiff must first provide evidence 20 showing that he/she is a member of a protected class; that he/she was performing 21 according to his or her employer's legitimate expectations, or in a failure-to-hire case, was 22 qualified for the position sought; that he/she was subject to an adverse employment action; 23 and that similarly situated individuals outside the protected class were treated more 24 favorably. McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 802. The burden then shifts to the employer to 25 articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for any adverse actions taken. Id. If 26 the employer meets this burden, the presumption created by the plaintiff's prima facie case 27 of unlawful discrimination “simply drops out of the picture.” St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 28 509 U.S. 502, 511 (1993).

1 The burden then shifts back to the plaintiff, who can survive summary judgment only 2 if he/she produce sufficient evidence to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether 3 the defendant's proffered nondiscriminatory reason is merely a pretext for discrimination.
4 Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co., 26 F.3d 885, 891 (9th Cir. 1994). There are two ways a plaintiff 5 may show pretext-either (1) directly, "by showing that unlawful discrimination more likely 6 motivated the employer" or (2) indirectly, "by showing that the employer's proffered 7 explanation is unworthy of credence because it is inconsistent or otherwise not believable."
8 Dominguez-Curry v. Nevada Transp. Dep't, 424 F.3d 1027, 1037 (9th Cir. 2005); see also 9 Texas Dep't of Cmty. Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 256 (1981).

10 C. Defendant's Motion

11 The government seeks summary judgment, arguing that the wrongful termination 12 and failure-to-reinstate claims are time-barred; that plaintiff cannot establish a prima facie 13 case of unlawful discrimination as to the termination of employment, the failure to reinstate, 14 or the failure to hire him for the statistical programmer position; that defendant had 15 legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons for its actions; that plaintiff cannot establish a hostile 16 work environment claim; that plaintiff cannot establish a prima facie case of retaliation; and 17 that plaintiff cannot rebut defendant's legitimate, non-retaliatory reasons.

18 In opposition, plaintiff argues that the statute of limitations on the claim of unlawful 19 termination should be tolled because of the "ongoing mediation" (referring to plaintiff's 20 communications with Congresswoman Eshoo's office) and defendant's "active deception 21 during mediation and destruction and late production of evidence," and because 22 defendants failed to produce documents they were ordered to produce by the court.

23 Plaintiff also contends that he has established a prima facie case of age, race, sex, 24 and national origin discrimination, and retaliation; that he has shown that the asserted 25 reasons for terminating him were pretextual; that he has raised a "triable issue of fact" 26 regarding his 2002 termination; and that he has shown that defendant's asserted reason for 27
28 failing to hire plaintiff for the statistical programmer position was pretextual.<sup>5</sup>

1. Claims of wrongful termination and failure to reinstate

The Secretary asserts that the claims of wrongful termination and failure to reinstate are time-barred because plaintiff did not contact the EEO counselor within 45 days of the occurrence of the alleged adverse actions, and because plaintiff did not file suit within 90 days of receiving the right-to-sue notice on those claims.

The EEOC has promulgated regulations governing claims brought under Title VII, the ADEA, the Rehabilitation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 791, et seq., and the Equal Pay Act, 29 U.S.C. § 206(d) by federal employees. See 29 C.F.R. Part 1614. As part of exhaustion of administrative remedies, a federal employee must seek EEO counseling within 45 days of the date of the alleged discriminatory act, or, in the case of personnel action, within 45 days of the effective date of the action. 29 C.F.R. § 1614.105(a)(1). The 45-day time limit in which to contact an EEO counselor begins to run on the date that the employee knew or reasonably should have known that the discriminatory practice occurred. 29 C.F.R. § 1614.105(a)(2). “Failure to comply with this regulation is ‘fatal to a federal employee’s discrimination claim.’” Cherosky v. Henderson, 330 F.3d 1243, 1245 (9th Cir. 2003) (quoting Lyons v. England, 307 F.3d 1092, 1105 (9th Cir. 2002)).

Unless the aggrieved person agrees to a longer counseling period, the EEO counselor must, within 30 days of the date the aggrieved person makes EEO contact, advised the aggrieved person of the right to file an administrative complaint of discrimination. 29 C.F.R. § 1614.105(d). The complaint must be filed within 15 days of the date of receipt of the notice. Id. A civil action under Title VII may not be filed until the administrative complaint process is complete and the aggrieved person has received a

<sup>5</sup> The court notes that plaintiff filed a “supplemental declaration” on February 29, 2008, and a “revised supplementary declaration” on March 3, 2008, seeking to make additional arguments in support of his claim that the time for filing suit should be equitably tolled, and in support of his assertion that the Secretary’s articulated nondiscriminatory reasons for employment decisions are pretextual. Under Civil Local Rule 7-3, plaintiff’s opposition was due on February 13, 2008, and the court is not required to consider any papers filed after that date. The court finds, however, that plaintiff’s late-filed declaration does not provide a basis for tolling the limitations period, and does not create a triable issue with regard to pretext.

1 notice of right to sue. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(c); 29 C.F.R. § 1614.110.

2 As an alternative to filing an administrative complaint, a federal employee claiming 3 discrimination on the basis of age may file a civil action in district court under the ADEA,
4 provided he gives the EEOC not less than 30 days notice of the intent to file such an action, 5 within 180 days of the occurrence of the alleged unlawful practice. 29 C.F.R.
6 § 1614.201(a).

7 If the aggrieved person does file an administrative complaint alleging age 8 discrimination, administrative remedies will be considered to be exhausted for purposes of 9 filing a civil action either (a) 180 days after the filing of the administrative complaint if the 10 agency has not taken final action and the individual has not filed an appeal, or (b) after final 11 action if the individual has not filed an appeal, or (c) after the issuance of a final decision by 12 the EEOC on an appeal or 180 days after the filing of an appeal if the EEOC has not issued 13 a final decision.

14 a. Wrongful termination

15 Plaintiff asserts that his termination from the Schedule B appointment was 16 discriminatory. As explained above, plaintiff sought EEO counseling on January 9, 2002, 17 alleging he had been discriminated against on the basis of race, national origin, and age on 18 September 14, 2001 – the date of the notice that his Schedule B appointment would be 19 terminated on October 15, 2002.

20 On February 11, 2002, plaintiff filed his first EEO charge, alleging that the proposed 21 termination on October 15, 2002, was based on race, national origin, and race. On March 22 2, 2002, plaintiff filed a second EEO charge, alleging harassment based on race, national 23 origin, and age, and also alleging retaliation for his February 2002 EEO filing. Thus, 24 plaintiff opted to proceed with an administrative complaint on both his Title VII claim and his 25 ADEA claim (although there is no evidence that he made contact with the EEO counselor 26 with regard to the harassment and retaliation claims).

27 Title VII requires that a civil action be filed within 90 days of the “giving of the notice” 28 of right to sue. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f) (1). Here, the right-to-sue notice relating to the

1 alleged discriminatory acts that occurred prior to October 2002 was contained in the 2 EEOC/OFO's decision affirming the finding of no discrimination by the AJ. That decision 3 was issued February 5, 2004, two and a half years before plaintiff filed the present action.
4 Thus, any claims of discrimination, harassment, or retaliation on the basis of race or 5 national origin based on events occurring while plaintiff was employed at the Palo Alto 6 CSPCC are time-barred.

7 Thus, the claim of wrongful termination is barred, based on plaintiff's failure to file 8 suit within 90 days of the date of receipt of the right-to-sue letter, as is any claim of 9 "harassment" by Dr. Lavori or Ms. Boeger, based on events that occurred while plaintiff was 10 employed at the Palo Alto CSPCC. The OFO addressed these harassment claims in its 11 February 5, 2004, decision, and plaintiff did not file a civil action within the statutory period.
12 Moreover, plaintiff cannot establish a "continuing violation" as to the harassment claim, as 13 his employment ended in October 2002.

14 Similarly, because plaintiff opted to file an administrative action, and did not file a 15 civil action at any time before the EEOC issued its final decision, plaintiff was required to 16 file his civil action no later than 90 days following his receipt of the EEOC's final decision.
17 29 C.F.R. § 1614.407.

18 Accordingly, the Secretary's motion must be GRANTED as to the claim of wrongful 19 termination.

20 b. Failure to "reinstate"

21 Plaintiff alleges that the VA improperly failed to "reinstate" him to his former job when 22 Ms. Thaneemit-Chen was promoted to a trial period as a mathematical statistician in 23 September 2003, and was subsequently offered a Schedule B appointment as a 24 mathematical statistician in April 2004.

25 Plaintiff contacted the EEO counselor regarding this issue in August 2004, claiming 26 that the VA had failed to "reinstate" him because of his race, national origin, age, and 2002 27 EEO activity. Thus, because plaintiff failed to contact the EEO counselor within 45 days of 28 the alleged unlawful practice, this claim is arguably time-barred.

1 Plaintiff argues, however, that because he filed a third EEO charge in September 2 2004, regarding what he terms “defendants’ entire course of wrongful conduct which 3 includes the 2002 termination,” and because (according to plaintiff) the discriminatory 4 conduct extended from 2002 until the April 2004 failure-to-reinstate and the November 5 2005 failure-to-hire, and the right-to-sue notice on the September 2004 charge was not 6 issued until August 2006, these claims are not time-barred. He appears to be attempting to 7 assert a continuing violation, even though he alleges discrete wrongful acts rather than a 8 course of conduct.

9 Plaintiff also argues that the limitations period should be tolled, asserting that while 10 he was waiting for the OFO’s decision on his appeal of the VA’s finding of no discrimination 11 on the first two administrative charges, he contacted Congresswoman Eshoo’s office to 12 “mediate” his complaint. He asserts that while that “mediation” was going on, the CSPCC 13 quietly promoted a less-qualified younger, female, statistical programmer (Ms. Thaneemit-14 Chen) to the position of mathematical statistician.

15 The court finds that the claim of failure to “reinstate” is not actionable as part of a 16 continuing violation. The term “employment practice” in Title VII refers to “a discrete act or 17 single ‘occurrence’ that takes place at a particular point in time.” Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire 18 & Rubber Co., 127 S.Ct. 2162, 2169 (2007). A plaintiff cannot recover for discrete acts of 19 discrimination as to which timely claims for relief have not been made. Id.; Nat’l R.R.
20 Passenger Corp. v. Morgan, 536 U.S. 101, 110-11 (2002). Discrete discriminatory acts are 21 not actionable if time-barred, even when they are related to acts alleged in timely-filed 22 claims. See Morgan, 536 U.S. at 122. Discrete acts include employment termination, 23 failure to promote, denial of transfers, reprimands, and refusals to hire. Id. at 114. A 24 continuing violation is not present where the alleged injury is simply a subsequent effect
25 resulting from a prior discriminatory act. See United Air Lines v. Evans, 431 U.S. 553, 556-26 57 (1977).

27 Nor has plaintiff established that he is entitled to equitable tolling or equitable 28 estoppel. The doctrine of equitable tolling focuses on the “plaintiff’s excusable ignorance of 1 the limitations period” and on the “lack of prejudice to the defendant.” Supermail Cargo, Inc.

2 v. United States, 68 F.3d 1204, 1207 (9th Cir. 1995). The Ninth Circuit allows equitable 3 tolling when a plaintiff is unable to obtain vital information bearing on the existence of his 4 claim while acting with all due diligence. Socop-Gonzalez v. I.N.S., 272 F.3d 1176, 1193 5 (9th Cir. 2001).

6 The focus in deciding the applicability of equitable tolling is on whether there was 7 excusable delay by the plaintiff. Santa Maria v. Pacific Bell, 202 F.3d 1170, 1178 (9th Cir.
8 2000). “If a reasonable plaintiff would not have known of the existence of a possible claim 9 within the limitations period, then equitable tolling will serve to extend the statute of 10 limitations for filing suit until the plaintiff can gather what information he needs.” Id.

11 Here, with regard to the wrongful termination claim, plaintiff received the right-to-sue 12 notice and cannot claim ignorance of the 90-day deadline to file a civil action. Moreover, the 13 Secretary would be prejudiced by having to defend against claims that were administratively 14 adjudicated in February 2004, with no further action by plaintiff. As for the claim of failure to 15 reinstate, plaintiff does not assert that he was ignorant of the 45-day requirement for 16 initiating EEO contact, or that he was ignorant of key information relevant to his potential 17 claim to explain why he failed to comply with the filing requirements. In short, he fails to 18 show that his delay was excusable or provide any evidence demonstrating a reasonable 19 excuse.

20 Nor has plaintiff established that equitable tolling applies because of his 21 communications with Congresswoman Eshoo’s office. Plaintiff provides no evidence 22 showing that Congresswoman Eshoo’s inquiry – at plaintiff’s request – prevented him from 23 pursuing his wrongful termination claim or his reinstatement claim. Plaintiff refers to his 24 communications with the Congresswoman’s office as some sort of “mediation” of his claim, 25 but this appears to be plaintiff’s own version of the facts, unsupported by evidence.

26 The doctrine of equitable estoppel focuses on the defendant’s actions in preventing a 27 plaintiff from filing suit. O'Donnell v. Vencor Inc., 466 F.3d 1104, 1111 (9th Cir. 2006).
28 Generally, equitable estoppel comes into play to excuse a failure to file an EEOC charge

1 within the requisite time period where an employer “misrepresents or conceals facts 2 necessary to support a discrimination charge.” Santa Maria, 202 F.3d at 1176-77. Here, 3 equitable estoppel is inapplicable as plaintiff does not allege that the Secretary took any 4 actions with the purpose of preventing him from bringing timely charges or concealing its 5 alleged adverse actions against him.

6 Finally, as to the merits of the claim of “failure to reinstate,” the evidence shows that 7 Ms. Thaneemit-Chen was not promoted to “replace” plaintiff, as he claims. Plaintiff’s 8 employment at the Palo Alto CSPCC ended in October 2002, while Ms. Thaneemit-Chen did 9 not begin her training as a mathematical statistician until September 2003 – almost a year 10 later. Thus, plaintiff fails to establish a prima facie case as to this claim.

11 Moreover, Ms. Thaneemit-Chen was not given the Schedule B appointment as a 12 mathematical statistician until April 2004, and that was only after CSPCC received a new 13 project (and additional funding) in September 2003, and in response to her request for a 14 promotion. The position was not advertised, and plaintiff provides no evidence that CSPCC 15 solicited or accepted applications for the appointment. Nor does he articulate any basis 16 upon which CSPCC should have considered him as a candidate.

17 Accordingly, the court finds that the Secretary’s motion must be GRANTED as to the 18 claim of failure to “reinstate.”

19 2. Claim of failure to pay

20 The Secretary identifies plaintiff’s “failure-to-pay” claim as one of the claims asserted 21 in the SAC, but does not discuss it as a separate claim. As noted above, plaintiff asserts 22 that he continued to work for the Palo Alto CSPCC after his term employment there had 23 ended, and that he should be compensated for that work. However, he provides no 24 evidence showing that anyone authorized him to perform the work – and in fact, conceded in 25 his deposition that the work was not authorized – and he plainly was not employed by the 26 VA at the time.

27 In his opposition to the Secretary’s motion, plaintiff claims that following his 28 termination in October 2002, he “continued to receive requests from Study Chairs of the 1 three studies on which Dr. Lavori stated had concluded.” He cites to a letter that he wrote 2 on January 14, 2004, summarizing the “list of services” that he allegedly provided to the 3 Palo Alto CSPCC after his termination, and for which he was requesting compensation.

4 Then, in his discussion of the wrongful termination claim, he argues that “has raised an 5 inference of discrimination by showing that he has continued to work without pay on the 6 same projects with the same group of people for nearly a year after his termination, and that 7 his position was immediately replaced.”

8       Thus, it is not clear whether plaintiff is asserting the “failure-to-pay” claim as a 9 separate claim, or simply as an adverse action that is part of his discrimination claim. In any 10 event, he does not have any evidence to support such a claim (other than his own self-11 serving letter to Dr. Lavori demanding payment from CSPCC), and, given that any such 12 work was voluntary, it is not clear why any failure to pay him could provide a basis for a 13 discrimination claim. Moreover, he has not shown that any similarly-situated person who 14 was not a member of one of his protected classes was treated differently – that is, paid for 15 voluntary work after a period of term employment had ended. Finally, to the extent that 16 plaintiff does intend this as a discrimination claim, it is time-barred because he did not 17 contact an EEO counselor until August 2004.

18       3.       Claim of failure to hire

19       The Secretary argues that summary judgment should be granted as to the failure-to-20 hire claim because the evidence is clear that the reason plaintiff was not selected to 21 interview for the statistical programmer position was that he did not have professional 22 experience as a programmer. Although plaintiff had experience working with programmers, 23 he had never actually worked as a programmer himself, whereas Ms. Wight (the person 24 hired to fill the position) had over seven years of experience working as a statistical 25 programmer on studies for Kaiser Medical Group and Kaiser Health Plan.

26       According to Mr. Doherty, the mathematical statisticians serve as leaders on the 27 CSPCC project teams, supervising statistical programmers assigned to projects, but not all 28 statisticians are qualified to be programmers, as the skills involved are very different. In Mr.

1 Doherty's view, plaintiff did not have the skills or the experience required for the position of 2 statistical programmer. The Secretary contends that plaintiff has produced no evidence that 3 defendant's reasons for failing to hire plaintiff as a statistical programmer were pretextual.

4 Plaintiff argues, however, that the Secretary's asserted reason for hiring Ms. Wight 5 for the statistical programmer position was pretextual. He claims that he was "plainly 6 superior" to Ms. Wight. In support, he cites to a chart he prepared, which is attached to his 7 declaration, purporting to show the disparities in their respective qualifications, as compared 8 with the stated requirements for the mathematical statistician position.

9 First, plaintiff notes that the job required an MS in Statistics, and points to his own
10 Ph.D. in Statistics, which he suggests makes him more qualified than Ms. Wight, who had a 11 Master's Degree.<sup>6</sup> Plaintiff also asserts that he is a "well-known expert" in the required area 12 of statistical modeling (survival, logistic, and linear regression), and claims that Ms. Wight 13 did not mention having knowledge of survival regression. He contends that the job required 14 the ability to provide leadership to junior programmers, and claims that he supervised 15 programmers while he was employed at the Palo Alto CSPCC, while Ms. Wight had no such 16 experience.

17 He also argues that he had 30 years' experience using SAS and a few years' 18 experience with S+/R (programming languages), while Ms. Wight had 10 years' experience
19 in SAS and none in S+/R; that he worked with Datafax and Unix for over 8 years at the Palo 20 Alto CSPCC, while Ms. Wight had no experience with those systems; and that he had over 21 27 years' experience with analysis plan design, while Ms. Wight had none

22 Plaintiff also argues that the asserted reason for not hiring him – that he had not 23 worked as a full-time programmer – was pretextual, as Ms. Wight's resume shows she had 24 not worked as a full-time programmer either.

25 The court finds that plaintiff has not established a prima facie case of discrimination 26

27 <sup>6</sup> Plaintiff refers to Ms. Wight as having a Masters of Public Health, although her 28 resume actually reflects that she had an M.P.H. in Epidemiology/Biostatistics.

1 based on the CSPCC's decision to hire Ms. Wight, as plaintiff's application provided no
2 evidence that he had worked as a statistical programmer. Thus, he did not meet the primary 3 qualification for the job. Moreover, the Secretary has articulated a legitimate, 4 nondiscriminatory reason for its selection of Ms. Wight to fill the position.

5 Contrary to plaintiff's assertion, the evidence shows that Ms. Wight had substantial 6 experience working as a statistical programmer in the field of health care research, and also 7 shows that she had supervised other workers. While it is true that plaintiff had substantial 8 experience as a mathematical statistician, the evidence shows he had no experience as a 9 statistical programmer. The Secretary has provided evidence showing that the skills 10 required for a statistical programmer are different than those required for a mathematical 11 statistician on a clinical study.

12 Moreover, Mr. Doherty testified in his deposition, and also states in his declaration, 13 that he had determined, based on the assessment by Ms. Thaneemit-Chen, that plaintiff's 14 programming sample did not demonstrate the intermediate-level coding skills required by 15 the position. According to Doherty, plaintiff provided a basic SAS program devoid of 16 statistical analyses, but Ms. Wight's code sample demonstrated her experience as an able 17 statistical programmer.

18 Accordingly, the court finds that the Secretary's motion must be GRANTED as to the 19 claim of failure to hire. The Secretary has articulated a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason 20 for the selection of Ms. Wight to fill the position of statistical programmer, and plaintiff has 21 provided no evidence raising a triable issue as to whether that reason was pretextual.

22 4. Claim of retaliation

23 Plaintiff appears to be asserting a number of retaliation claims. First, he contends 24 that he was terminated in October 2002 because he had complained (during the period 25 2000-2002, in the two anonymous surveys and in an e-mail to Dr. Lavori) about 26 discriminatory treatment of other employees at the CSPCC. Second, he asserts that he was 27 not "reinstated" to his position of mathematical statistician when the funding became 28 available in April 2004 because he had filed an administrative claim of discrimination against

1 the CSPCC in 2002. Third, he contends that he was not hired as a statistical programmer in 2 2005 because of his prior EEO charges and complaints of discrimination. Fourth, he claims 3 he was harassed in the workplace in reprisal for his EEO activities.

4 For the reasons stated above with regard to the discrimination claims, the retaliatory 5 termination claim, the retaliatory failure-to-reinstate claim, and the retaliatory harassment 6 claim are time-barred or otherwise without merit. Thus, the only possible viable claim is the 7 failure-to-hire claim.

8 To make out a prima facie case of retaliation, plaintiff must establish 1) involvement 9 in a protected activity; 2) an adverse employment action; and 3) a causal link between the 10 two. Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc., 281 F.3d 1054, 1064 (9th Cir. 2002); see also 11 Poland v. Chertoff, 494 F.3d 1174, 1179-80 & n.1 (9th Cir. 2007). Thereafter, the burden of 12 production shifts to the employer to proffer legitimate reasons for the adverse employment 13 action. Brooks v. City of San Mateo, 229 F.3d 917, 928 (9th Cir. 2000). Once the employer 14 carries this burden, the plaintiff must demonstrate a genuine issue of material fact as to 15 whether the reason advanced by the employer is pretextual. Id.

16 The Secretary argues that plaintiff cannot establish a prima facie case of retaliation 17 based on the failure-to-hire claim because he does not allege an adverse employment 18 action, as the actions plaintiff complains of did not constitute a “disadvantageous change in 19 the workplace,” or cause a material change in the conditions or terms of employment. The 20 Secretary also asserts that there was too long a temporal gap between the protected 21 activities and the failure to reinstate or hire, and thus, there is no causal connection. In 22 addition, the Secretary asserts that plaintiff cannot rebut its legitimate, non-retaliatory 23 reasons for deciding not to renew plaintiff’s term appointment, failing to reinstate plaintiff, 24 and failing to hire him as a statistical programmer.

25 In opposition, plaintiff argues that he has made out a prima facie case as to all four 26 categories of alleged retaliation. With regard to the claim of retaliatory failure-to-hire, 27 plaintiff makes the same arguments he makes in support of his discriminatory failure-to-hire 28 claim.

1 As stated above, any claim of alleged retaliation based on the termination in 2002, 2 the failure to “reinstate” in 2004, or workplace harassment is time-barred, either because 3 plaintiff failed to initiate EEO counselor contact within 45 days, or because plaintiff failed to 4 file a civil action within 90 days of receiving the right-to-sue notice in February 2004, or both.

5 With regard to the claim of retaliatory failure to hire in 2005, the court is not entirely 6 persuaded by the Secretary’s argument regarding the lack of an adverse action, as the 7 failure to hire would qualify in that regard. An “adverse employment action” is “any adverse 8 treatment that is based on a retaliatory motive and is reasonably likely to deter the charging 9 party or others from engaging in a protected activity.” Ray v. Henderson, 217 F.3d 1234, 10 1244 (9th Cir. 2000). The court finds, however, that the motion must be GRANTED 11 because plaintiff has not provided evidence sufficient to create a triable issue regarding the 12 existence of a causal link between the VA’s failure to hire plaintiff and plaintiff’s prior EEO 13 activity.

14 Retaliatory intent can be inferred when an adverse employment action occurs within 15 a “reasonable period of time” after complaints of discrimination. Passantino v. Johnson & 16 Johnson Consumer Prods., 212 F.3d 493, 507 (9th Cir. 2000). Here, however, 17 approximately 18 months had elapsed between plaintiff’s filing of his third EEO charge in 18 September 2004, and the March 2006 decision to hire Ms. Wight for the position of 19 statistical programmer.

20 This period is simply too long to constitute sufficient circumstantial evidence of 21 causation to establish a prima facie case of retaliation. See Clark County Sch. Dist. v.
22 Breeden, 532 U.S. 268, 273-74 (2001) (“[a]ction taken . . . 20 months later suggests, by 23 itself, no causality at all”); Villiarimo, 281 F.3d at 1065 (“[a] nearly 18-month lapse between 24 protected activity and an adverse employment action is simply too long, by itself, to give rise 25 to an inference of causation”). Moreover, plaintiff provides no evidence suggesting that he 26 was singled out or was treated differently than other employees. See Brooks, 229 F.3d at 27 929 (no basis for retaliation claim absent evidence that plaintiff was singled out or treated 28 differently than other employees).

1           Moreover, plaintiff has not provided evidence sufficient to create a triable issue as to 2 whether the Secretary's articulated reason for hiring Ms. Wight for the statistical programmer
3 position was pretextual. See Lindsey v. SLT Los Angeles, LLC, 447 F.3d 1138, 1148
4 (where plaintiff provides no evidence to refute defendant's legitimate explanation, summary 5 judgment is appropriate, even though the plaintiff may have established a minimal prima 6 facie case).

7           Accordingly, the court finds that the Secretary's motion must be GRANTED as to the 8 claim of retaliation.

9 D.     Plaintiff's Claims of Discovery Abuse

10          Plaintiff asserts that the Secretary's motion for summary judgment should be denied 11 because defendant failed to produce certain documents in discovery. It isn't clear whether 12 plaintiff is arguing that the motion should be denied as a sanction for discovery abuse, or 13 that it should be denied pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56(f), but in either 14 instance, the arguments are without merit.

15          Plaintiff claims that the Secretary "destroyed" evidence (apparently some e-mails that 16 were no longer on the CSPCC's system when plaintiff sought them in discovery) and 17 produced evidence "late." He argues that the court should impose sanctions pursuant to 18 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(b)(2)(A) and (C), in the form of denying defendant's 19 motion for summary judgment and giving an "adverse inference jury instruction" so that the 20 jury would be permitted to conclude that the destroyed documents contained information 21 adverse to defendant.

22          He provides a list of five documents or categories of documents that were allegedly 23 destroyed or withheld, but does not explain their significance. These five documents or 24 categories of documents are (1) the IPA statistician contract with Dr. Bloch of Stanford, 25 which was not produced (according to plaintiff) until mid-2007; (2) plaintiff's 2000 e-mail
26 complaint to Dr. Lavori regarding discriminatory treatment of other CSPCC employees; 27 (3) plaintiff's comments regarding discrimination in the two anonymous surveys – the 2001
28 VA survey and the 2002 Palo Alto CSPCC survey; (4) documents relating to "the promotion

1 of a younger female Statistical Programmer who took over plaintiff's Schedule-B Statistician
2 position during Eshoo mediation (referring to Ms. Thaneemit-Chen); and (5) documents 3 relating to the hiring of Ms. Wight in 2006, which plaintiff claims were produced only after he 4 brought a motion to compel.

5 Plaintiff also contends that he was "unable to answer" the "issues to be decided" 6 identified by the defendant in the opening brief, "due to the fact that defendant failed to 7 produce the Court-Ordered documents which are needed to justify the opposition pursuant 8 to FRCP 56(f)(1)." However, he does not explain how these documents would provide 9 evidence sufficient to create a triable issue and defeat summary judgment.

10 The Secretary responds that all non-privileged, responsive documents have been 11 produced, and that plaintiff has provided no basis for the imposition of sanctions. The 12 Secretary notes that plaintiff acknowledges that Dr. Bloch's IPA agreement was produced in 13 2007, and contends that plaintiff provides no support for his claim that defendant "destroyed 14 or withheld" the other four documents or categories of documents.

15 The Secretary asserts that he has produced more than 6600 documents in response 16 to plaintiff's document requests. The Secretary provided evidence showing that he 17 searched the mail server at the Palo Alto CSPCC for e-mails dated between 1999 and 2001, 18 including e-mails between plaintiff and Lavori since 1999 with the word "Boeger;" and e-19 mails between plaintiff and John Foesser (former Chief researcher and Development 20 Officer, and creator of the 2001 survey). The Secretary also searched the system for 21 documents relating to the 2002 Palo Alto CSPCC survey and Lavori's paper files.

22 The Secretary contends that after 2001, CSPCC accounts were placed on the 23 servers at the VA's main facility at Palo Alto, and those servers were also searched.
24 However, the main server used for most e-mails at the Palo Alto facility retain e-mails for 25 only approximately 60-90 days. The Secretary pulled the e-mails for numerous CSPCC 26 employees, and also searched the e-mails at the VA facility in Ann Arbor, Michigan, where 27 Ronis (who coordinated the 2001 survey) works.

28 However, the Secretary was unable to locate plaintiff's 2000 e-mail complaint to

1 Lavori (which in any event was a document generated by plaintiff, not by anyone at the Palo 2 Alto CSPCC). In March 2007, the Secretary advised plaintiff that his comments about 3 discrimination (on the survey forms) had been shredded, at his request, before any 4 summaries were created, and that all the original questionnaires were shredded some time 5 in 2002.

6 The Secretary also asserts that he also has provided all documents relating to the 7 promotion of Ms. Thaneemit-Chen, and to the decision not to hire plaintiff for the statistical 8 programmer position in 2005.

9 To the extent that either of these requests constitutes a motion, the court finds that it
10 should be DENIED. A Rule 37 motion for sanctions does not provide a basis for denying a 11 motion for summary judgment. Put another way, an opposition to a motion for summary 12 judgment is not a proper place for a Rule 37 motion. In any event, a Rule 37 motion must 13 be filed as a separate motion, and in accordance with the local rules regarding the filing of 14 motions. Civ. L.R. 37-3, 7-2, 7-8.

15 Moreover, any Rule 37 motion should have been directed to the magistrate judge to 16 whom the court referred all discovery disputes. It is true that plaintiff filed at least one 17 motion to compel discovery, and the motion was granted in part and the Secretary ordered 18 to produce certain documents. However, plaintiff provides no evidence that the Secretary 19 withheld documents, and no support for his claim that the destruction of old e-mails, 20 standing alone, warrants sanctions. The Secretary, on the other hand, has clearly 21 represented that all responsive, non-privileged documents were produced.

22 Similarly, the motion does not comport with the requirements of Rule 56(f). Rule 56 23 provides that the court may deny the motion or order a continuance, if the opposing party 24 shows by declaration that "the party cannot for reasons stated present by affidavit facts 25 essential to justify the party's opposition." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(f).

26 Thus, to obtain postponement or denial of a summary judgment motion for further 27 discovery, the opposing party must submit a declaration showing (a) facts establishing a 28 likelihood that controverting evidence may exist as to a particular material fact, (b) the

1 specific reasons why such evidence cannot be presented in opposition to the motion at the 2 time, and (c) the steps or procedures the opposing party intends to utilize to obtain such 3 evidence. See Schwarzer, Tashima & Wagstaffe, Federal Civil Procedure Before Trial
4 (2007) § 14:114. Plaintiff has not provided such a declaration, and has not met his burden 5 under Rule 56(f).

6 CONCLUSION

7 In accordance with the foregoing, the court finds that defendant's motion for summary 8 judgment must be GRANTED.
